Run a string through the holes of the toilet paper tube. This bird feeder will hang horizontally. Bring the two ends together at the top and tie the string into a knot. Your bird feeder is ready to be placed out in a location for the birds! Consider hanging your feeder on the branches of a tree or on a fence where your birds naturally like to spend time. You want to use all natural peanut butter as this is safest for the birds. If you have allergy concerns with peanut butter you can replace it with almond butter, cashew butter, sunflower seed butter or suet. Make sure your toilet roll is clean and smooth. You can create a bird feeder that hangs vertically by punching holes in the top and running the string through the holes. Try making both and see if your birds prefer one design over the other. Learn what types of birds live in your yard and make sure you buy bird seed that is appropriate for them. Dont leave it out in the rain and once the birds have finished eating, just toss out the bird feeder. Great project idea at home, school or camp. Spread a thick layer of peanut butter on the TP roll. Ensure you cover the entire outside of the roll. Turn your garden into a bird park with a few home-made bird feeders. It is important to strategically place them around the garden so you can look at them up close and personal. It is a great way to use up household items/items you would put in the recycling, or even in the bin. They're cheap, easy and a great activity to do with your little ones. Plus it will be rewarding to see that the birds, squirrels and other wildlife are enjoying the feeders that they created and designed. You can even give them away as a gift to other wildlife lovers, so they can enjoy the beautiful bird stool. Make sure you don't spread it too thin as you want these seeds to stick. You can either sprinkle them on top or roll the peanut butter tube on a plate with seeds. You can make a simple bird feeder out of all kinds of items. From pine cones to logs and from toilet paper roll to orange rinds. This is a great versatile craft that can be done with any age, anytime of year, in any area. Today I'm sharing three easy-to-make bird feeders that anyone can make using ingredients and items found in your home.
